OPENING EXHIBITION

Selections from the Collection of Edward R. Broida

September 3–November 12, 2006
East Building, Upper Level

In the last thirty years, the late Los Angeles real estate developer Edward R. Broida assembled a collection of twentieth-century art that is legendary in its scope and scale. In 2005, Broida gave the National Gallery of Art sixty-two modern and contemporary paintings, sculptures, and works on paper by twenty-three different artists.

The Gallery will showcase forty-one of these works, such as in-depth groups by Vija Celmins (b. 1938) including the trompe l'oeil sculpture Eraser (1967) and major paintings by Philip Guston (1913–1980) including Rug (1976), as well as an extraordinary group of seven drawings from Guston's crucial decades, 1952–1975. Other important additions to the collection on view will be the Gallery's first works by Wolfgang Laib (b. 1950), as well as key abstract expressionist drawings by Willem de Kooning (1904–1997) and Franz

Philip Guston, Rug, 1976. Gift (Partial and Promised) of Edward R. Broida, National Gallery of Art, Washington

Kline (1910–1962). These works encompass almost every style and period of the twentieth century and place artists in historical and artistic context.

Organized by the National Gallery of Art, Washington.

Alexandre-Louis-Marie Charpentier, Self-Portrait (?), 1887. Private collection

CONTINUING EXHIBITION

Alexandre-Louis-Marie Charpentier (1856–1909)

Through January 28, 2007
West Building, Ground Floor

Although Alexandre-Louis-Marie Charpentier enjoyed great success at the end of the nineteenth century as a medalist and relief sculptor, his work has only recently been rediscovered by museums and collectors. An overview of his prolific career, this exhibition is the first devoted to him since his death in 1909 and draws from the largest private collection of his art.

A versatile and largely self-taught sculptor, Charpentier experimented with a variety of materials including bronze, silver, pewter, embossed leather and paper, terracotta, plaster, and pâte de verre (molded glass). The works shown range from a crumb brush to the artist's self-portrait bust, and from intimate miniature portraits of children to medals of public figures, such as the novelist Émile Zola.

Organized by the National Gallery of Art, Washington.

OPENING EXHIBITION

Constable's Great Landscapes: The Six-Foot Paintings

October 1–December 31, 2006
East Building, Mezzanine

English artist John Constable (1776–1837) regarded the six-foot landscapes he began to paint in 1818–1819 as his most significant achievements. This exhibition will focus on these great paintings and the full-size oil sketches for them. To create such large-scale works, Constable found he needed an intermediate stage between his small oil studies and the final painting, and he chose to work out the diverse elements of the large compositions on a full-size canvas. The oil sketches he made in preparation for the final paintings are remarkable works in their own right. Some of Constable's most famous paintings are in the exhibition, including The Hay Wain (1820–1821), View on the Stour near Dedham (1822), The Leaping Horse (1825), and Hadleigh Castle (1829).

The catalyst for the exhibition was the recent cleaning of the oil sketch for the first six-foot painting, The White Horse, which Constable exhibited at the Royal Academy in 1819. The cleaning of the sketch, which is in the collection of the National Gallery, revealed nothing less than a lost masterpiece under layers of disfiguring nineteenth-century repaint.

A fully illustrated scholarly catalogue addressing the nature and special character of these paintings, their place in the modern landscape tradition, and the context of Constable's art, accompanies the exhibition.

Organized by the National Gallery of Art, Washington, Tate Britain, London, and the Huntington Library, Art Collections and Botanical Gardens, California.

The exhibition is made possible by General Dynamics and General Dynamics United Kingdom, Ltd.

The exhibition is supported by an indemnity from the Federal Council on the Arts and the Humanities.

OPENING EXHIBITION

The Streets of New York: American Photographs from the Collection, 1938–1958

September 17, 2006–January 15, 2007
West Building, Ground Floor

This exhibition of some seventy photographs covers an exceptionally fertile period in American photography between the publication of Walker Evans' American Photographs in 1938 and the release of Robert Frank's The Americans in 1958. During these two decades several photographers working in New York profoundly changed the course of the medium.

Key works by Evans and Frank, as well as candid studies of children by Levitt, poignant explorations of African American life by DeCarava, bold depictions of New York bars and nightclubs by Model, and disturbing photographs of New York's latent violence by Klein and Weegee, are drawn from the Gallery's collections, and include recent major acquisitions.

Organized by the National Gallery of Art, Washington.

The exhibition is made possible by the generous support of the Trellis Fund and The Ryna and Melvin Cohen Family Foundation.

CLOSING EXHIBITION

Henri Rousseau: Jungles in Paris

Through October 15, 2006
East Building, Mezzanine

The first major American retrospective of work by enigmatic French painter Henri Rousseau (1844–1910) in over twenty years includes more than fifty paintings in the exhibition, such as The Hungry Lion Throws Itself on the Antelope (1905), The Dream (1910), and Tropical Forest with Monkeys (1910). The display of Rousseau's fantasy landscapes depicting a seductive and terrifying faraway world, alongside the artist's paintings of his homeland France, reveals how both groups of paintings reflect the fears and desires of a new modern era.

A poor, low-ranking customs agent, Rousseau was a self-taught painter who harbored dreams of fame in the Academy. During his lifetime his work was ridiculed by the public and rejected by traditionalists. Ultimately, however, it was acclaimed by early twentieth-century avant-garde artists including Picasso and the surrealists.

This painter of exotic locales never left France; Rousseau's jungles are fantasies of a city dweller inspired by a wide variety of sources, on view in the exhibition, including a taxidermic specimen from a nineteenth-century French zoo, life-size bronze sculptures, and print reproductions.

Among the most admired masterworks of the Renaissance, Titian's Pastoral Concert (Concert Champêtre) (c. 1510), is being lent by the Louvre to the United States for the first time. The exhibition also features significant loans from major European museums such as The National Gallery, London; the Museo del Prado, Madrid; and the Galleria degli Uffizi, Florence.

Organized by Tate Modern, London, and Réunion des musées nationaux and Musée d'Orsay, Paris, in association with the National Gallery of Art, Washington.

The exhibition is sponsored in part by the National Automobile Dealers Association.

The exhibition is supported by an indemnity from the Federal Council on the Arts and the Humanities.

Rousseau Film

A thirty-minute film, Henri Rousseau: Jungles in Paris, narrated by Kevin Kline, has been produced by the National Gallery of Art for this exhibition. The film considers Rousseau's jungle paintings as part of the French fascination with the exotic in the later nineteenth century during the nation's colonial expansion. The film features archival film and photos as well as new footage of Rousseau's Parisian "jungles": the parks, zoos, and greenhouses that fueled his imagination. A short version screens continuously in a theater adjacent to the exhibition. The full-length film is available for sale in the Gallery Shops.

Master Drawings from the Woodner Collections

Through November 26, 2006
West Building, Ground Floor

Ian Woodner (1903–1990) formed one of the foremost private collections of old master and modern drawings in the United States. In 1991 Woodner's daughters, Dian and Andrea, placed the core drawings of the collection at the Gallery, to memorialize their father's achievement as a collector. This exhibition, celebrating the fifteenth anniversary of the arrival of the Woodner drawings at the Gallery, honors the ongoing generosity of Dian and Andrea Woodner, who have donated a total of one hundred drawings from their father's collection.

Spanning more than six centuries of European draftsmanship, the show includes outstanding works by such great artists as Sandro Boticelli, Leonardo da Vinci, Albrecht Dürer, Raphael, Rembrandt van Rijn, Jean-Honoré Fragonard, Francisco de Goya, Jean-Auguste-Dominique Ingres, Edgar Degas, and Pablo Picasso.

Organized by the National Gallery of Art, Washington.

Early Netherlandish Painting

This series presents an overview of painting in the Low Countries during the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries, in anticipation of the exhibition Prayers and Portraits: Unfolding the Netherlandish Diptych opening November 12. An intense period of experimentation and discovery, the Renaissance in the modern-day countries of Belgium and the Netherlands explored the physical and spiritual worlds in new ways, witnessed a resurgent interest in the individual, and drew inspiration from both the medieval past and Italian humanism. A related gallery talk follows the series to afford discussion of Netherlandish paintings in the collections of the National Gallery of Art. (Presented by J. Russell Sale)

October 5: The Age of Jan van Eyck and Rogier van der Weyden

October 12: Crosscurrents of Piety and Humanism in the Later Fifteenth Century

October 19: The Rise of Genre Painting and Landscape

October 26: Nature, Reform, and the Lure of Italy in the Sixteenth Century

Notes on Marie Menken

Menken's experimental films of the 1940s laid a foundation for the blossoming of the New York avant-garde and inspired Andy Warhol's work in cinema. In a mesmerizing new portrait by Czech filmmaker Martina Kudláček to be shown in early September, Menken and her downtown New York friends re-create this pivotal moment in American art history.

Death in Venice (Morte a Venezia)

Composer Gustav von Aschenbach (played by Dirk Bogarde), staying in Venice to fend off exhaustion while rumors of an epidemic fly through the fetid summer air, becomes fixated on the beauty of young Tadzio, a Polish child on holiday with his family. Sharing with Thomas Mann's novella an obsession with moral and spiritual collapse, Luchino Visconti conveys his ideas through a measured pace and a mesmerizing Mahler score. This restoration of Visconti's classic film has been loaned by the Cinecittà archive in Rome.

Benoît Jacquot and the Literary Screen

One of the most refined sensibilities working in film today is that of French director Benoît Jacquot (b. 1947). Not only has he beautifully adapted a popular Puccini opera for the screen, but he has also made extraordinary films from two novels by Henry James, two plays by Marivaux, and a variety of works by Kafka and Borges. This series presents six films by Jacquot, five literary adaptations as well as a documentary on the legendary French actor Louis Jouvet.

New Short Films from France

A selection of seven award-winning French shorts from the Festival International du Court Métrage de Clermont-Ferrand, one of the largest short film festivals in the world, held annually in central France, celebrates the art of this distinctive film genre.

Film still from The Sentimental Bloke, screening on September 10 as part of the film program

The Sentimental Bloke and Au Bonheur des Dames

Two programs in September will present new restorations of distinctive silent films from France and Australia, each accompanied by an orchestra from its respective country. On September 10, the American public premiere of Australia's most beloved silent film comedy, The Sentimental Bloke (1919), features music by the Melbourne-based ensemble The Larrikins. On September 30, Au Bonheur des Dames (1929), Julien Duvivier's charming interpretation of Émile Zola's story about a provincial girl who finds a job in a Paris department store, is accompanied by the Parisian ensemble Octuor de France, with Gabriel Thibaudeau conducting.

The Big Combo

A new restoration from the University of California, Los Angeles Film and Television Archive, The Big Combo (1955) has all the proper stylistic touches (shadows, fog, wet pavement, snappy dialogue) and all the classic characters (brash crime boss, neurotic detective, tough but self-destructive moll, and thickheaded hitmen) to make it the archetypal film noir. The film will be shown only on October 1.

Borderless Sound: Swiss Documentary

Documentary filmmaking in Switzerland is an extraordinarily rich and sophisticated tradition. A variety of styles and themes is represented in this five-part program in October, from studies of society and portraits of artists and musicians to pure essays on an array of topics. The program has been organized in association with Pro Helvetia, the Swiss Arts Council, and through the assistance of Ralph McKay and the Embassy of Switzerland.

Noir on New York Streets

In conjunction with the exhibition The Streets of New York: American Photographs from the Collection, 1938–1958, two weekends in October are devoted to a festival of film noir set on Manhattan's streets and avenues, gritty locations that serve as low and lurid milieus for the genre's down-on-their-luck protagonists and alienated tough guys. Such treasures as Kiss of Death (1947), Side Street (1950), Pickup on South Street (1953), and The Naked City (1948) are included in the program, concluding with Killer's Kiss (1957) on November 4.

Winky's Horse (Mischa Kamp, The Netherlands, 2005, 95 minutes)
October 7 at 10:30
October 8 at 11:30
Ages 6 and up
In Dutch with English subtitles

Six-year-old Winky Wong has just moved to a small Dutch seaside town where her family recently opened a Chinese restaurant. At first, Winky finds it difficult speaking a new language and trying to make friends. She bonds with a beautiful old horse and visits this new friend every day, even though her parents forbid her to ride. When the animal becomes ill and must be put to sleep, Winky decides she wants a pony of her own.

At school, Winky is excited to learn about the Dutch tradition of Sinterklaas (Saint Nicholas) and the presents he brings children, but can Sinterklaas really give Winky such a big gift? Winky's Horse is a wonderfully gentle film that deals sensitively with the immigrant experience through the eyes of a young child, addresses issues of loss in an honest and tender manner, and provides a fascinating look at unique Dutch Christmas traditions. This magical story proves that wishes can come true—often, in the most unexpected ways.
