Alfred Stieglitz Key Set

When Stieglitz arrived in Paris he wrote: “The great city is full of fascination and beauty. I am particularly pleased in studying the different phases of life here, have done some photographing and secured several good things. Photographs I have seen here are rather mediocre, nothing worth speaking of. It is rather odd that no better work is done here, as the city simply is ‘chuck’ full of motives of all descriptions” (“Editorial Comment,” The American Amateur Photographer 6 [June 1894]: 274).

This photograph depicts the intersection of Boulevard des Italiens and rue Scribe.
