Unpaid Internships and Research Assistantships

In addition to paid internships and fellowships at the National Gallery of Art, a number of unpaid internships and research assistantships are available. Interns work in various Gallery departments, supervised by a curator or other department head. Interns contribute to ongoing Gallery projects and programs and are invited to participate in museum seminars that introduce the staff, departments, programs, and functions of the Gallery. Research assistants concentrate on specific projects and do not attend the museum seminars.

Eligibility

Unpaid intern positions are open to graduate students currently enrolled in a degree program and to recent recipients of a relevant advanced degree. Preference will be given to graduate students with funding from another granting institution or agency (such as Fulbright). For postgraduate participants, the master's degree must have been conferred within one year and the doctoral degree must have been conferred within two years of the proposed start date.
