

SUMMER LECTURES AT THE NATIONAL GALLERY OF ART

Starting on Sunday, June 8th, a course of 13 Sunday lectures in the history of art will be given at 4:00 P.M. in the auditorium of the National Gallery of Art.

The series, which will include outstanding films on related material, will present a survey of the history of art in historical sequence. The first lecture by Dr. Raymond S. Stites, Curator in charge of Educational work, will be on "The Nature of Primitive Art", and will be accompanied by a film "American Indian Art of the Pacific Northwest."

The second lecture on Sunday, June 15th, will be by Dr. Margaret Bouton, and will deal with the art of Egypt; this will be accompanied by a film "This is Egypt", shown by courtesy of the United Arabian Republic.

Subsequent lectures will deal with the arts of Greece and Rome, the Early Christian and Byzantine periods, Mediaeval, Renaissance, Baroque, 19th Century, and contemporary arts.

In its entirety the series, which will be given by members of the Gallery staff, will present a comprehensive review of the history of art, illustrated by the best art films available.

The series is open to the public without charge.
