Washington, DC–During April, a tribute to Parisian director Alain Resnais and actress Fanny Ardant incorporates two of their most famous films—Mélo. (1986, screening on April 21 at 3:00) and La Vie est un roman (1983, screening on April 29 at 4:30). The first is an adaptation of Henri Bernstein’s popular 1929 French melodrama of a doomed ménage à trois, and the latter is Renais’ charming musing on the utopian idea that human life somehow can be improved.

April in Paris
Also in April, the radiance of an earlier Paris fills the National Gallery of Art’s East Building Auditorium when Parisian Panorama 1920–1930 gets underway. A cinematic homage to the city of light, this series of evocative tableaux of parks, dance halls, theaters, cafés, and clubs portrays a bustling Paris in all seasons and all hours. Presented in conjunction with the exhibition Paris in Transition: Photographs from the National Gallery of Art (on view through May 6, in the West Building), the program, which screens April 14 through April 21, includes the following silent films of the 1920s: Etudes sur Paris, Paris Cinema, La Tour, Paris qui dort, and Paris Express, and the early sound feature films Sous les toits de Paris and Paris la nuit.

Belle Toujours, a new film by the eminent Portuguese director Manoel de Oliveira, will receive its Washington premiere on June 2. Finding his inspiration in Luis Buñuel’s legendary Belle de jour, De Oliveira creates a charming sequel, set in contemporary Paris and starring the incomparable Michel Piccoli and Bulle Ogier.

Two outstanding music and film events are scheduled this spring. The acclaimed three-member percussion and keyboard Alloy Orchestra returns to the National Gallery on April 22 to perform its new score for a restoration of the exquisite and rarely seen romantic Hollywood silent Lonesome (1928)—one of the most beautiful and sophisticated films of all time—by Hungarian-American director Pál Fejös. The second music and film event on May 5 will feature the world premiere of a new organ score for Frank Borzage’s enchanting Seventh Heaven (1927), performed by composer and renowned theater organist Dennis James.

Czech Modernism 1920–1960

Czech Modernism 1920–1940 provides a glimpse of the vibrant film culture that flourished in Prague following World War I. Twelve films, principally from the 1930s, examine the impact of avant-garde photography on cinematic narrative and mise-en-scène. Two works by the prominent director Gustav Machatý and a selection of social-problem films such as The Strike and The Distant Journey, are among the highlights. This series, organized by Irena Kovárová, is presented through the cooperation of the Czech Center, New York, and the National Film Archive, Prague, and will be screened from May 12 through June 17. This series overlaps with the exhibition Foto: Modernity in Central Europe, 1918–1945, which opens on June 10 in the East Building.

Winslow Homer and Paul Mellon Documentaries
The Washington premiere of the first full feature-length documentary on Winslow Homer’s life takes place on May 27. Filmmaker Steven John Ross will introduce Winslow Homer: Society and Solitude (2007) and stay for a discussion after the film. Paul Mellon: In His Own Words, a new hour-long biographical film, screening on June 9 and 10, celebrates the spirit, life, and philosophy of Gallery founding benefactor Paul Mellon. The film draws from archival footage, speeches, and a variety of writings in which Mellon describes his passions, pursuits, and interests including family, art, collecting, horses, and racing. The screening is part of the Gallery’s celebration of the centennial of Mellon’s birth throughout 2007.

In Praise of Documentaries: The Flaherty
For the sixth year, the Gallery salutes the annual independent seminar and showcase known as The Flaherty, the prestigious American venue designed for the critical examination of experimental, documentary, and overlooked works of fiction that takes place annually at Vassar College. Named for pioneer American filmmaker Robert Flaherty, In Praise of Independents: The Flaherty this year includes the work of Austrian filmmaker Fridolin Schönwiese—who will be present at the event—and Czech filmmakers Vit Klusák and Filip Remunda. The screenings take place through April 8.

Restored Print
Other film events at the Gallery this spring include a restored print of the stunning Mexican feature Days of Autumn (Días de Otoño) photographed by cinematographer Gabriel Figueroa and directed by Roberto Gavaldón (1962), premieres of new documentaries on Armenian directors Sergei Paradjanov and Rouben Mamoulian, and a discussion of the contemporary cinema of Iran by Hamid Dabashi, professor of Iranian studies and comparative literature at Columbia University.

Films are shown in original format in the East Building Auditorium, located at 4th Street and Constitution Avenue NW. Seating is on a first-come basis. To ensure a seat, you must arrive at least ten minutes before showtime. For current film information, visit www.nga.gov/programs/film.htm (http://www.nga.gov/programs/film.htm) or call (202)
