College Graduates and Post-Graduates from Twelve States and Four Countries Awarded Summer Internships at the National Gallery of Art

Washington, DC—The National Gallery of Art awarded internships to 22 graduates and post-graduates representing twelve states and four countries. The Gallery’s summer internship program, which offers paid professional museum training, began its full-time, nine-week session on Monday, June 4, and runs through Friday, August 3.

The interns represent diverse backgrounds with a range of educational experience—including art history, American studies, chemistry, music, law, and film history. They were selected based on their strong interest in museum work, outstanding academic achievement, and letters of recommendation. Most of the interns are pursuing advanced degrees.

Internship Program Selection

A Gallery-wide committee, with input from mentoring departments, selected the interns through a competitive process. Each intern is completing a project directed by a Gallery curator or department head and participates in biweekly orientation sessions in order to become familiar with all aspects of museum work. They are working throughout the Gallery in 19 departments, including curatorial, education, conservation, library, archives, music, film, and administration. The internship program is supported by individual gifts and endowment funds and is administered by the department of academic programs in the division of education. Information about this and other Gallery internship programs is available at www.nga.gov/education/interned.htm or (202) 842-6257.
