10th Season of Jazz in the Garden Concert Series Begins on May 28 at the National Gallery of Art

The Jazz in the Garden concert series, the National Gallery of Art’s beloved summer tradition, begins its 10th season on Friday, May 28, with weekly performances through Friday, September 10. The free concert series features an array of jazz artists performing a range of styles—from swing to progressive to Latin—every Friday evening from 5:00 to 8:30 at the National Gallery of Art Sculpture Garden, rain or shine.

The concert series welcomed an unprecedented number of attendees last summer, totaling nearly 200,000 guests for the season. The relaxed garden setting, coupled with the friendly cultural atmosphere, has made this event a favorite Friday after-work destination for Washingtonians and visiting families alike. Musicians perform in front of the Pavilion Café while visitors sit around the grand central fountain or relax on a blanket on the beautifully landscaped grounds. Guests may indulge in the Pavilion Café’s food and beverages or bring their own picnics.*

Jazz in the Garden guests may enjoy even more of the Gallery’s collection this summer a newly acquired sculpture and a restored favorite. Roxy Paine’s Graft, the artist's first work to enter the collection, was installed in the fall of 2009. This tree-like structure representing two fictive but distinct species joined in the same form, is a perfect match with the Sculpture Garden, a place that balances art and nature with the urban, yet verdant, setting of the nation's capital. Hector Guimard’s An Entrance to the Paris Métropolitain, which has been in restoration for the past year, has been reinstalled next to the Pavilion Café.

Jazz in the Garden is sponsored by Guest Services, Inc., and the National Gallery of Art.

Performances

In case of inclement weather, concerts are held inside the Pavilion Café. The schedule for this season’s Friday evening concerts is as follows:

Refreshments from the Pavilion Café

A special menu of appetizers, entrees, and salads is available inside the Pavilion Café, while carts serving barbecue pork sandwiches, beef and shrimp kabobs, and gelato are located throughout the garden. A variety of beverages—beer, wine, sangria, mixed drinks, and soda—is sold on-site.* View the full Jazz in the Garden menu at www.jazzinthegarden.com.

Pick Up a Picnic Basket

Savvy concertgoers may skip the lines and avoid the hassle of bringing their own picnics by preordering the Pavilion Café's signature Jazz in the Garden Picnic Basket. At a budget-conscious $25, the keepsake basket (serving two) offers artisanal bread baguettes, meats and such cheeses as Wensleydale cranberry and smoked Gouda, gourmet dips and spreads flavored with smoked salmon and artichoke, fresh summer fruits, and bottled Saratoga water. Wine by the bottle can be added for an additional price.* Also included is a calendar of other free programs and exhibitions at the Gallery. Guests may preorder baskets and wines by the bottle at www.jazzinthegarden.com or by calling (202) 289-3360. Baskets may also be purchased at the Pavilion Café, availability permitting.

*Alcoholic beverages may not be brought to the premises from outside.

Beat Memories: The Photographs of Allen Ginsberg
The improvisational nature of jazz—particularly that of Charlie Parker and Dizzy Gillespie, and the bebop style that was popular in the 1950s—is reflected in the spontaneous and uninhibited prose of many Beat writers. This year, Jazz in the Garden coincides with Beat Memories: The Photographs of Allen Ginsberg, the first scholarly examination of American poet Allen Ginsberg's photographs, on view at the National Gallery of Art May 2–September 16, 2010. In honor of the exhibition, the first concert on May 28 features bebop music performed by female jazz vocalist Leslie Summey.

The exhibition explores Allen Ginsberg's photography from his 1950s "drugstore" prints, including celebrated portraits of Jack Kerouac and William S. Burroughs, to his later portraits of the Beats and other friends made in the 1980s and 1990s. Ginsberg (1926–1997) started taking photographs in the early 1950s when he purchased a small, secondhand Kodak camera. For the next decade he captured numerous intimate shots of himself as well as his friends and lovers. He abandoned photography in 1963 and did not return to it until the early 1980s. Encouraged by photographers Berenice Abbott and Robert Frank, he reprinted much of his early work and began making new portraits, adding extensive inscriptions. Although Ginsberg's photographs form a compelling portrait of the Beat and counterculture generations from the 1950s to the 1990s, his pictures are far more than mere historical documents. The same ideas that inform his poetry—an intense observation of the world, a deep appreciation of the beauty of the vernacular, a celebration of the sacredness of the present, and a faith in intuitive expression—also permeate his photography.

The exhibition is made possible through the generous support of the Trellis Fund, with additional support from The Robert Mapplethorpe Foundation, Inc.
