Fall Lecture Program at the National Gallery of Art Highlights Exhibitions, American Writer James Baldwin, New Publications by Noted Authors, the Sydney J. Freedberg Lecture on Italian Art, and More

Faya Causey, head of academic programs, National Gallery of Art, moderates a panel discussion on The Image of the Black in Western Art, Volume 5: The Twentieth Century, Part 2: The Rise of Black Artists. A book signing follows the program.

Washington, DC—This fall, the National Gallery of Art offers an array of public lecture programs featuring a distinguished group of artists, authors, curators, poets, and scholars. Highlights of the season include the annual Sydney J. Freedberg Lecture on Italian Art, programs honoring James Baldwin, two public symposia, a panel discussion, and five book signings.

Artist Ursula von Rydingsvard visits the Gallery on September 21 to discuss her sculptural practice, which often incorporates 4 × 4 cedar beams. Although her work is abstract, the artist has acknowledged a strong correlation to the human figure, most visible in her vertically oriented conical works, such as Five Cones (1990–1992), currently on view in the East Building Atrium.

James Baldwin, American essayist, novelist, playwright, and poet (1924–1987), is honored with programming to mark the 90th anniversary of his birth. On September 11, poets Carolyn Forché and E. Ethelbert Miller offer a reading of and reflections on Baldwin’s work in the East Building Atrium, and on October 12, Karen Thorsen and Douglas Dempsey Thorsen discuss the making of their award-winning documentary, James Baldwin: The Price of the Ticket, before presenting the world premiere of its new restoration in the Gallery’s West Building Lecture Hall.

The exhibitions Degas/Cassatt and Degas’s Little Dancer are explored in multiple programs highlighting conservation and curatorial research. On September 14, senior conservator Ann Hoenigswald delivers the lecture Degas and Cassatt as Collaborators: A Look Beneath the Layers. Hoenigswald joins curator Kimberly A. Jones on September 15 to examine the relationship between Degas and Cassatt. To celebrate the closing day of Degas/Cassatt on October 5, the Gallery will hold a public symposium titled Degas and Cassatt: Different Perspectives. On November 23, Daphne Barbour, Alison Luchs, and Shelley Sturman take visitors inside the extraordinary life of Degas’s sculpture Little Dancer Aged Fourteen (1878–1881), which inspired the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts’ world-premiere musical Little Dancer, running from October 25 through November 30, 2014.

Captain Linnaeus Tripe (1822–1902), who captured some of the first images of important cultural and geographic sites in India and Burma (now Myanmar), is the subject of two programs in conjunction with Captain Linnaeus Tripe: Photographer of India and Burma, 1852–1860, the first major traveling exhibition of Tripe’s work. Exhibition curator Sarah Greenough introduces the exhibition on September 28. On December 10, noted scholars, including John Falconer and Holger Hoock, discuss Tripe’s work in a public symposium.

Miguel Falomir delivers the 18th annual Sydney J. Freedberg Lecture on Italian Art entitled Venice 1948: Titian Looking at Tintoretto’s "Miracle of the Slave" on November 9.

On November 16, a panel discussion between David Bindman, Adrienne L. Childs, Ruth Fine, Kobena Mercer, and Sharmila Senis moderated Faya Causey. A book signing of Image of the Black in Western Art, Volume 5: The Twentieth Century, Part 2: The Rise of Black Artists follows the lecture. This will be the fourth panel discussion at the Gallery to honor this series.
All lecture programs are presented free of charge and take place in the West Building Lecture Hall unless otherwise noted. Seating is on a first-come, first-seated basis.
