EXHIBITIONS

A retrospective exhibition of American painting from the 18th to the 20th centuries will open at the Tate Gallery in London about the middle of June, to continue on view for six weeks. This exhibition has been organized by the National Gallery of Art at the request of the Trustees of the Tate Gallery. In the selection of paintings, the Gallery had the assistance of the directors of the following American museums: Museum of Fine Arts, Boston; Philadelphia Museum of Art; Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York; Whitney Museum of American Art, New York; Cleveland Museum of Art; Art Institute, Chicago; Phillips Memorial Gallery, Washington; and the Director of Research of the Museum of Modern Art, New York.

LECTURES

The series of lectures on American museums will continue through June, with discussions of the Metropolitan Museum of New York and the Walters Gallery of Baltimore.

A group of three lectures will be devoted to Hals, Vermeer and Rembrandt, Dutch painters of the 17th century who are especially well represented in the Gallery's collection.
