Fall 2018
National Gallery of Art

A Major Survey of Rachel Whiteread
Gordon Parks’s Early Work
Corot’s Paintings of Women
Evenings at the Edge Returns
Corot: Women
September 9 – December 31, West Building, Main Floor
Depicted in rustic Italian costume or nude on a grassy plain, rendered with a sophisticated use of color and a deft, delicate touch, the women in Corot’s paintings convey a mysterious sense of inner life. Corot: Women features 46 paintings of nudes, individual figures in costumes, and an allegorical series of the model in the studio, all created between the 1840s and the early 1870s.

Organized by the National Gallery of Art, Washington / Made possible through the support of The Edwin L. Cox Exhibition Fund and Leonard and Elaine Silverstein / Supported by an indemnity from the Federal Council on the Arts and the Humanities

Dawoud Bey: The Birmingham Project
September 12 – March 17, West Building, Ground Floor
This exhibition presents selections from Bey’s The Birmingham Project, a monument to the victims of the 16th Street Baptist Church bombing in Birmingham, Alabama, on September 15, 1963. Coinciding with the 55th anniversary of this tragedy, the exhibition of four large-scale photographs and one video — all recent acquisitions — explores how Bey represents the past through the lens of the present, pushing the boundaries of portraiture and engaging ongoing national issues of racism, violence against African Americans, and terrorism in churches.

Organized by the National Gallery of Art, Washington
Rachel Whiteread
September 16 – January 13, East Building, Concourse
The first comprehensive survey of Whiteread’s work, this exhibition brings together over 100 objects from the course of the artist’s 30-year career, including sculptures, drawings, photographs, archival objects, documentary materials on public projects, and several new works on view for the first time. Ranging in scale and effect from the monumental to the modest, Whiteread’s works memorialize everyday objects, domestic interiors, and public spaces in a variety of industrial materials, detailing the way fixtures of everyday life change over time.
Organized by the National Gallery of Art, Washington, and Tate Britain / Made possible by Dr. Mihael and Mrs. Mahy Polymeropoulos / Supported by Amanda and Glenn Fuhrman and The FLAG Art Foundation / Additional funding provided by The Exhibition Circle of the National Gallery of Art

In the Library: Rachel Whiteread’s Ghost
September 17 – January 11, East Building Study Center
In conjunction with Rachel Whiteread, the Library presents a focused installation of materials relating to the artist’s breakthrough sculpture Ghost, 1990, made by casting the interior of a Victorian room at 486 Archway Road in plaster. The installation includes ephemera documenting the history of the sculpture as well as photographs of the domestic space’s inhabitants to reveal the personal dimension of this seminal work in the Gallery’s collection.
Organized by the National Gallery of Art, Washington
The Chiaroscuro Woodcut in Renaissance Italy
October 14 – January 20, West Building, Ground Floor
Chiaroscuro woodcuts — color prints made from the successive printing of multiple blocks — flourished in 16th-century Italy, interpreting designs by leading masters such as Raphael, Parmigianino, and Titian, while boasting extraordinary craft and their own, often striking palette. Comprising more than 100 impressions from American and British collections, extensive new research, and far-reaching interpretations, this exhibition explains the chiaroscuro woodcut as an essential phenomenon in the history of printmaking, as well as one of the most beautiful.
Organized by the Los Angeles County Museum of Art in association with the National Gallery of Art, Washington

Ugo da Carpi after Parmigianino, Diogenes, c. 1527 – 1530, National Gallery of Art, Washington, Pepita Milmore Memorial Fund

Jackson Pollock’s Mural
Through October 28, East Building, Upper Level
This special installation features Mural (1943) by Jackson Pollock, on loan from the University of Iowa Museum of Art and on view for the first time in Washington, DC. Originally commissioned by Peggy Guggenheim for her New York City town house, this early painting — nearly 20 feet long — is Pollock’s largest work, and represents a major turning point in both his career and his style. Also on view are paintings and works on paper by Pollock from the Gallery’s collection, including Number 1, 1950 (Lavender Mist) (1950).
Organized by the National Gallery of Art, Washington

Jackson Pollock, Mural, 1943, University of Iowa Museum of Art, Gift of Peggy Guggenheim, 1959.6. Reproduced with permission from the University of Iowa
November 4 – February 18, West Building, Ground Floor
The first formative decade of Parks’s 60-year career is the focus of an exhibition showcasing some 150 photographs, as well as books, magazines, and pamphlets. This exhibition reveals how Parks’s early experiences at the Farm Security Administration, Office of War Information, and Standard Oil Company (New Jersey), as well as his close relationships with Charles White, Langston Hughes, Roy Stryker, Richard Wright, and Ralph Ellison, shaped his groundbreaking style.

Organized by the National Gallery of Art, Washington, in collaboration with the The Gordon Parks Foundation / Bank of America is a proud sponsor of the exhibition / Generous support also kindly provided by the Trellis Fund / Additional support comes from The Exhibition Circle of the National Gallery of Art

Water, Wind, and Waves: Marine Paintings from the Dutch Golden Age
Through November 25, West Building, Main Floor
This exhibition explores the multifaceted relationship the Dutch had with the water through some 45 paintings, drawings, prints, rare books, and ship models. Drawn largely from the Gallery’s collection, images range from quiet harbor views and frozen canals to dramatic shipwrecks and fierce naval battles, revealing the importance of the water in the Dutch Golden Age.

Organized by the National Gallery of Art, Washington / Generously supported by the Hata Foundation / Additional support provided by The Exhibition Circle of the National Gallery of Art
Sense of Humor
Through January 6, West Building, Ground Floor
Prints and drawings have frequently been vehicles of humor, from caricature to satire and the simply comical. This exhibition presents some 100 works from the Gallery’s collection by Jacques Callot, William Hogarth, Francisco de Goya, and Honoré Daumier, as well as by Winsor McCay, Andy Warhol, the Guerrilla Girls, and Art Spiegelman, among many others.
Organized by the National Gallery of Art, Washington

Spaces: Works from the Collection, 1966 – 1976
Ongoing, East Building, Mezzanine
Inspired by presentations of single-room artworks at the Dwan Gallery (1959 – 1971) and the exhibition Spaces (1969 – 1970) at the Museum of Modern Art, this installation features five significant minimal and postminimal sculptures; several of these works have been donated to the Gallery by Virginia Dwan or given in her honor. Among the works on view are Fred Sandback’s Untitled (One of Four Diagonals), Charles Ross’s prismatic sculpture Hanging Islands, recently refabricated by the artist for this installation, and Robert Morris’s Untitled (Battered Cubes).
Organized by the National Gallery of Art, Washington
