The National Gallery is most grateful to the Yanagita-Bogin Duo for their cooperation in substituting on very short notice for Aaron Rosand, who is ill.

MASAKO YANAGITA began her violin studies at age six with Eijin Tanaka, continuing in Tokyo with Louis Graeler, concertmaster of the Japan Philharmonic. In 1966 she was awarded a Fulbright Scholarship and a John D. Rockefeller III Grant, which enabled her to come to the United States to study with William Kroll at the Mannes College of Music in New York City. She took part in the Tanglewood Festival during her first summer in this country on a Jascha Heifetz scholarship, and was presented the Silverstein Prize as the leading violinist in Tanglewood that summer. She subsequently won top honors in a number of international competitions, including the Paganini in Genoa, the Carl Flesch in London, and the Munich International Competition.
Ms. Yanagita has had an extensive career as soloist with orchestra and in recital. She has performed at numerous festivals, including Mostly Mozart, Mohawk Trail Concerts, The Tappan Zee Concerts, Caramoor, Madeira, and the Grand Canyon Music Festival. In addition to the many duo recitals she performs with her husband, Abba Bogin, she serves as concertmaster of the Queens and Springfield (Massachusetts) Symphony Orchestras. A member of the faculty at the Mannes College of Music in New York City, Ms. Yanagita also teaches at Hunter College and at several music camps in New England and New Jersey. She has recorded for The Musical Heritage Society, Vox/Turnabout, and Music Minus One.

Pianist ABBA BOGIN, a native New Yorker, is a graduate of the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia, where he studied piano with Isabella Vengerova and orchestration with Gian-Carlo Menotti and Samuel Barber. He is a winner of the prestigious Naumburg Award, the Philadelphia Orchestra Youth Competition, and numerous other prizes. Mr. Bogin has appeared throughout the United States, Canada, Europe, and the Far East, both in recital and as soloist with major orchestras and conductors, and has recorded extensively. He is equally at home on the podium, having conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the American, Hudson Valley, Queens, and Springfield (Massachusetts) Symphonies, the Lake George Opera, and the New York City Light Opera. Also known for his chamber music collaborations, in recent years Mr. Bogin has been appearing regularly with the Tappan Zee Chamber Players, the Mohawk Trail Concerts, the Chelsea Chamber Ensemble, the Grand Canyon Music Festival, the Bennington (Vermont) Chamber Music Conference, and at Music Mountain in Connecticut.

Schubert did not produce an extensive output for violin and piano. A complete listing includes the three Sonatinas of 1816, the much larger A Major Sonata of 1817, the Rondo brillant and the gigantic Fantasie in C Major. However, the quality of writing in all of these works is equal to the finest of the composer's creations. Schubert himself called the 1816 works Sonatas, but they were renamed by his publisher, and the diminutive titles have remained permanently.

Although Hindemith wrote sonatas for just about every instrument and piano as well as chamber music for all sorts of combinations of instruments, even including the heckelphone, the viola has the largest repertoire, since he was an active performing violist. In the mid-thirties, pressured by the Nazi regime in his native Germany, Hindemith left Europe and came to the United States, where he was soon engaged by the music department of Yale University. During his long tenure at Yale, he taught composition and theory while continuing to compose. He also wrote important books about composition, theory, and harmony, which, although now some forty years old, are still used as standard teaching texts.
Beethoven wrote and published ten "Sonatas for Piano and Violin". The fifth of these, completed in 1801, displays instant melodic appeal as well as energy and humor, with the result that it is one of the most performed. Although Haydn and Mozart had written sonatas for violin and keyboard, it was not until the advent of the new pianoforte that Beethoven was able to write much differently for both instruments. The composer was a true virtuoso at the piano, and his writing for the violin challenges the abilities of the string player, as well. The Scherzo of the "Spring" Sonata may very well be the shortest single movement in the standard sonata repertoire, yet it is as complete a unit as any!
