This evening's concert marks the thirty-sixth time that a Viennese New Year concert has been offered at the National Gallery. Richard Bales and the National Gallery Orchestra presented the first one on 2 January 1966. The inspiration for this gala event is the New Year concert in the famous Musikverein in Vienna, a tradition that began in 1939. All those who hear the Vienna Philharmonic play in that historic hall on New Year's Day are part of an illustrious musical legacy, which includes such giants as Brahms, Bruckner, Mahler, and the Strauss family. Through recordings, radio, and television, this annual celebration of Viennese music has become a world-famous musical event. The presence of the audience and its reaction to sublime moments, favorite tunes, and musical jokes on stage are as important as the players in this festive drama.

The spirit of this joyful event is perfect for a celebration of the New Year. The familiar music expresses not only nostalgia for beauty and happiness now past, but also energy, liveliness, humor, and hope, as it carries us, now whirling in a waltz, now pulsating in a march, through the present time and into the future.

Over the years, the Viennese concert at the National Gallery has taken on the same significance for Washington as the Musikverein concert has for Vienna. It has proven to be one of the Gallery's most popular concerts, and it is offered as a heartfelt wish, expressed in music, for a happy and prosperous New Year.
