The Musicians

THE CHORAL ARTS SOCIETY OF WASHINGTON

The Choral Arts Society of Washington, under the leadership of its artistic director and founder, Norman Scribner, is one of the preeminent symphonic choruses in the country. Consisting of nearly two hundred experienced choral singers, Choral Arts has performed with the world’s leading conductors and symphony orchestras, produced acclaimed recordings, and toured internationally. The Choral Arts Society presents a broad spectrum of selections from established choral repertoire as well as local and world premieres in its own subscription series at the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts.

Choral Arts performs annually for the nationally televised Kennedy Center Honors and Capitol Fourth Celebrations as well as the annual Choral Tribute to Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. These performances have been broadcast nationally on National Public Radio’s “Celebrating the Choral Arts” with Martin Goldsmith and Norman Scribner.

The chorus has also performed for the funeral of Senator Robert F. Kennedy, the inaugurations of Presidents Carter and Reagan, Maestro Mstislav Rostropovich’s 60th Birthday Gala Celebration, and at the bicentennial celebration of the United States constitution. Among their more unusual assignments, Society members were invited to test the acoustics of Washington’s subway system as it was being built. Donning hardhats, the choristers performed the famous “echo chorus” from Handel’s Alexander’s Feast, that included the phrase “the vaulted roofs rebound.”

NORMAN SCRIBNER

Considered an institution among his conducting colleagues, Norman Scribner is one of Washington’s most versatile and respected musical figures. As artistic director of one of the major symphonic choruses in the United States for more than forty years, he has led and prepared The Choral Arts Society for numerous national television appearances, performances with the world’s leading orchestras, and several recordings and international tours.

This concert is made possible in part by support from the Embassy of Spain performing the standard repertoire, world premieres, and new works commissioned by the Society.

In 1971 Scribner assembled a professional choir to perform in the world premiere of Leonard Bernstein's Mass for the opening of The Kennedy Center, at the request of the composer. Two years later Scribner prepared the choir for a performance and recording of Haydn’s Mass in Time of War under Bernstein’s direction. An accomplished pianist, Scribner was the staff keyboardist for the National Symphony Orchestra from 1963 to 1967. He has also served as guest conductor of the Symphony on several occasions.
Scribner is the composer of a choral symphony, Love Divine, commissioned by the United Methodist Church and premiered at the church’s General Conference in Baltimore, and a choral work, Song for Saint Cecilia, performed at the United States Supreme Court.

Scribner’s musical presence in Washington began immediately after graduating with honors from Baltimore’s Peabody Conservatory, when he became conductor of the American University Chorale, assistant organist of Washington National Cathedral, and organist-choirmaster of St. Alban’s Episcopal Church. During his expansive career, he has held teaching positions at American University, George Washington University, and the College of Church Musicians of Washington National Cathedral.

As a testament to Norman Scribner’s influence on the quality of musical life in the nation’s capital, Washingtonian Magazine named Scribner “Washingtonian of the Year” in 1984.

DOUGLAS RIVA

Described by Spanish composer Xavier Montsalvatge as “an exceptional pianist,” Douglas Riva has gained international recognition for his “profound knowledge of Spanish music” (La Vanguardia, Barcelona). His interpretations of the works of Enrique Granados, in particular, have earned Riva a reputation as this generation’s leading exponent of the composer’s piano music. Natalia Granados, the composer’s daughter, attests: “Mr. Riva knows everything relating to my father to perfection.” After a highly acclaimed recital at Madrid’s historic Residencia de Estudiantes, Mundoclasico.com hailed Riva as “the successor of Granados,” commenting that his performance “captivated the audience to such a point that one was perfectly able to forget the pianist and listen only to the distinguished and pure serenity of the music.”

In the realm of contemporary music, Riva gave the world premiere performances of Gazebo Dances by John Corigliano and two works written for him by Catalan composer Xavier Turull. In 1987 he gave the first United States performance of a newly discovered sonata by Domenico Scarlatti at the National Gallery of Art. He has recorded numerous programs for television and radio in Brazil, Holland, Portugal, Spain, and the United States.
Riva has lectured at Harvard University, New York University, the University of California, Riverside, and for the Sociedad Española de Música in Madrid. He is the assistant editor of the eighteen-volume critical edition of the complete works for piano of Enrique Granados, edited by Alicia de Larrocha and published by Editorial Boileau, Barcelona.

Riva began his musical education at age nine, studying both the piano and the flute. His professional career began at the age of sixteen as the principal flutist of the El Paso (Texas) Symphony Orchestra. Later, devoting himself exclusively to the piano, he continued his studies at the Juilliard School, New York University, and in Barcelona at the Academia Granados-Marshall, founded by Granados.
Program Notes

The exhibition The Art of Power: Royal Armor and Portraits from Imperial Spain, on view in the West Building of the National Gallery until November 1, 2009, is a rich demonstration of the visual symbols used by Spanish monarchs from the fifteenth to the eighteenth centuries to establish and reinforce their power. The same monarchs were also active patrons of music, who either commissioned or kept as court musicians some of Europe’s most influential composers, including Josquin des Prez (c. 1450–1521), Antonio de Cabezon (1510–1556), Tomás Luis de Victoria (1548–1611), and Domenico Scarlatti (1685–1757). This evening’s program—which celebrates not only the exhibition but also the continuing contribution of Spanish and Hispanic genius to the world of music—contains music by Spanish composers from the sixteenth, nineteenth, and twentieth centuries.

This year marks the centenary of the death of Isaac Albeniz, one of the composers who best expressed the Spanish soul in music. Composed in 1887, Minuetto del gallo is one of the finest movements of all of Albeniz’ sonatas, and presages the innovations of his later works. Evocacion, the opening piece of Albeniz’ masterpiece Iberia, expresses with tenderness, nostalgia and bitterness a profound love for his native Spain, viewed through the binoculars of a self-imposed exile.

Federico Mompou was born in Barcelona, but lived in Paris for many years. Preludios nos. 1, 2, and 6 were composed there between 1927 and 1930. Strikingly individualistic, they are highly varied and poetic.

Many of the light-filled compositions by Joaquín Turina were inspired by his native Seville. The suite Por las calles de Sevilla is a quintessential Turina masterpiece. Its first movement, Reflejos en la torre, was inspired by the light and shadows thrown onto the Torre del Oro (Tower of Gold) by the Guadalquivier River. Ante la virgen de la Merced conveys the profound religious fervor of Seville. In La calle de las sierpes, Turina captures the joy of life and animation found on this emblematic street in the center of the city.

Composed in 1909 and dedicated to Albéniz, the passionate and mysterious Andaluza was the first masterpiece by Manuel de Falla. It is one of four dance pieces for piano published as Cuatro piezas españolas: Aragonese, Cubana, Montanesa and Andaluza. All four pieces are a blend of Spanish nationalism and French impressionism, but Aragonese and Andaluza are most closely related to the folk music of those regions.

On the night of March 11, 1911, one of the most significant concerts in the history of Spanish music took place at Barcelona’s Palau de la Música Catalana, a program devoted entirely to the music of Enrique Granados, performed by the composer himself. The concert included the world premiere of Cant de les estrelles. A virtuoso piano concerto scored for piano, organ, and three choruses, it is one of Granados’ finest compositions. Subtitled “Poem for piano, organ and chorus inspired by a poem by [Heinrich] Heine,” Cant de les estrelles is not a translation of any specific Heine poem but rather a response to Heine’s poetry written from the point of view of the stars themselves. The author’s name remains a mystery. Walter A. Clark comments that “the preoccupation with death expressed in the final strophe is eerily portentous of the fate soon to visit the possible author of these lines: Granados himself.”

In spite of its success, Granados did not publish Cant de les estrelles, and neither he nor any other pianist had occasion to perform it again in his lifetime. Following Granados’ death the manuscript remained in the family archive until 1938, when his son Victor brought it to New York and signed a contract for its publication with Nathanial Shilkret. Due to the confusion caused by the Spanish Civil War and World War II, the Granados manuscript remained unpublished for decades. After the Shilkret archive suffered a fire in 1964, all the manuscripts were feared lost. In 1982 Granados’ daughter, Natalia, appointed Douglas Riva as the family representative in the search for this manuscript. After a long search, the document was found, and, on March 22, 2007, Cant de les estrelles was performed for the second time in New York by Riva and the Voices of Ascension, under the direction of Norman Keene. The concert was recorded live by Naxos and released as a CD, Song of the Stars, making Granados’ glorious music again available to the world.

Oh, Immensitat eternal dels espais!
Follia i febre d’amor, deliri no hem conegut mai! Mai!
Per això és nostra vida eterna serena i pura nostra llum.

Quan en la nit calmada, guaitant del fons de la blavor llunyana, veiern com cerqueu repòs debades pels vostres cors assedegats per la febre inestroncable del desig.

Per això (per’xò) és nostra vida eterna i pura nostra llum.
quan, en la calma nit, de vosaltres ens compadim!

Som filles de la nit, ulls d’esguard brillant, que a través dels espais vers vosaltres compassives girem!
Som victimes de l’amor! No havern conhort!

L’eterna serenitat, que augusta plana en el cel, enfondeix nostra pietat vers vostra estèril anhel.
Ahl!, eterna serenitat del cel.

Lliures voldriem volar! Ah!
Som presoners de l’amor!
Com ens podrem desilliurar?

Feblesa porteu al cor!
Debades repòs cerqueu!
Volem conèixer nous mons!
Encisos d’amor trenqueu!

No podem rompre els grillons!
Immensitat!
Eternitat!
Eternitat! Ah!

Song of the Stars
Translation by Colin Whiteley

Oh, infinite vastness and stillness of space!
Oh, wild delirium of love, whose fever we never can know! No!
And so we live for ever shining down with pure serene starlight.

When in the still of the night, we wait and watch from out of the deep blue distance, Overwhelmed by the insatiable fever of desire.

And so we live on for ever, shining with pure light
When in the still of the night, with compassion to you we turn!

We daughters of the night, shining brightly down,
Across the vastness of space we turn with compassion to you!
We victims of love’s cruel spell! Never find repose!

Infinite stillness of space, bearing relentlessly down,
Deepens our pity for you. Longing in vain to find peace.
Infinite stillness of space.

Oh for the freedom to fly! Ah!
No more the prisoners of love!
How can we break off the bonds?

Love in man’s heart makes him weak!
Vainly he hopes for release!
We want to visit new worlds!
Break the enchantment of love!

There’s no escape from its bonds!
Infinite space!
Endlessly still!
Endlessly still! Ah!

O magnum mysterium
From the Latin liturgy

O magnum mysterium et admirabile sacramentum, ut animalia viderent Dominum natum, jacentem in praesepio.

O beata virgo, cujus viscera meruerunt portare Dominum Jesum Christum.

Alleluja!

O quam gloriosum
From the Latin liturgy

O quam gloriosum est regnum in quo cum Christo gaudent omnes Sancti! Amicti stolis albis, sequuntur Agnum quocunque ierit

Ave Maria
From the Latin liturgy

Ave Maria gratia plena Dominus tecum; benedictus tu in mulieribus, et benedictis fructus ventris tui Jesus.

Sancta Maria, Regina caeli, dulcis et pia, O Mater Dei, ora pro nobis peccatoribus, ut cum electis te videamus.
