Upcoming Events of the Seventy-Sixth Season of The William Nelson Cromwell and F. Lammot Belin Concerts

Unless otherwise noted, all programs take place in the West Building, West Garden Court.

---

Tamagawa University Taiko
Drummers and Dancers
April 13, 12:10
East Building Atrium

---

Fretwork
Featuring music by Alexander Goehr and J. S. Bach
April 15, 3:30

---

Inscape Chamber Orchestra
Featuring Saint-Saëns’s Carnival of the Animals, with new verses by Marc Bamuthi Joseph, and Mahler’s Symphony no. 4, chamber version
April 22, 3:30

---

The Westerlies
The Songs We Sang: American Vocal Music of the 20th Century
In celebration of International Jazz Day, the Westerlies premiere four pieces by Duke Ellington adapted for brass quartet.
April 29, 3:30

---

Julia Bullock, soprano
John Arida, piano
Music by Schubert, Barber, Fauré, and more
May 6, 3:30

---

Ranky Tanky
Celebrating Outliers and American Vanguard Art
May 13, 3:30

---

Christina and Michelle Naughton
Piano music by Mozart, Schubert, Bolcom, Bach/Kurtág, Debussy, Chopin, and Lutosławski
May 20, 3:30

---

Admission to the National Gallery of Art and all of its programs is free of charge, except as noted.

The use of cameras or recording equipment during the performance is not allowed. Please be sure that all portable electronic devices are turned off.

The department of music produced these program notes. Copyright © 2018 Board of Trustees, National Gallery of Art, Washington Concerts are made possible in part through the generosity of donors to the National Gallery of Art through The Circle. Reserved seating is available in recognition of their support. Please contact the development office at (202) 842-6450 or circle@nga.gov for more information.

Cover Michel Sittow, Portrait of Diego de Guevara (?) (detail), c. 1515/1518, National Gallery of Art, Washington, Andrew W. Mellon Collection

nga.gov/music
Program

Heinavanker Ensemble
Ilona Muhel, soprano
Kadri Hunt, alto
Sander Pehk, tenor
Tõnis Kaumann, baritone
Taniel Kirikal, bass
Margo Kõlar, artistic director, tenor

Celebrating Michel Sittow: Estonian Painter at the Courts of Renaissance Europe

APRIL 8, 2018 / 3:30
WEST BUILDING, WEST GARDEN COURT

“Oh Aadam, sinu essitus” (Oh Adam, Thy Falsehood)
Folk hymn from Otepää Parish

Kyrie, Mass of Barcelona (14th century)

“Nüüd ole Jeesus kiidetud” (Praised Be You, Jesus Christ)
Folk hymn from Kihnu Parish

“Mu süda, ärka üles” (Awake My Heart)
Arr. Margo Kõlar, after various versions of a folk hymn

“Rahva Õnnistegija” (Redeemer of the Folk)
Folk hymn from Suur-Pakri Parish

Sanctus, Mass of Tournai (14th century)

Agnus Dei, Mass of Toulouse (14th century)

“Ma olen maa peal võõras” (A Stranger on Earth Am I)
Folk hymn from Vormsi Parish

“Mu mano tulge latse” (Let the Children Come to Me)
After a folk hymn from Vormsi Parish
“Veni Creator Spiritus”/“Oh Jumal, Looja, Piüha Väim” (Come Creator Spirit)
Arr. Margo Kölar, after a Gregorian chant and a folk hymn from Lääne, Nigula Parish

Intermission

“Loomine” (Creation)
Arr. Margo Kölar, after a traditional runic song from Ambla Parish

“Nätse Jummal, siin ma rummal” (Here Behold Me as I Cast Me)
Folk hymn from Räpina Parish

“Imeline koda” (Wondrous House)
Arr. Margo Kölar, after a traditional Estonian runic song from Vilo Parish

“Haned kadunud” (Missing Geese)
Arr. Margo Kölar, after a traditional Estonian runic song from Kuusalu Parish

“Jeesuse soit” (The Ride of Jesus)
Arr. Margo Kölar, after a traditional Estonian runic song from Mäe, Estonia

The Ensemble

Heinavanker is a unique meeting point for musicians active in different fields. Since 1996, the Estonian vocal ensemble, under the direction of composer Margo Kölar, has delved into early sacred music, its ancestors’ traditions, and contemporary imagination. Ancient Estonian runic songs and folk hymns are an important part of Heinavanker’s repertoire.

The name “Heinavanker” originates from the Haywain Triptych of Hieronymus Bosch (1450–1516). Its allegoric scenes are as if inspired from today’s life. In this fascinating painting, there’s a huge stack of hay rolling through a land that’s laboring in greed towards destruction. In the midst of this, music arises. Both a snide demon and a praying angel are trying to get the musicians into their domain.

This concert is dedicated to the centenary of the Republic of Estonia.
Program Notes

The first half of our program includes settings of the Ordinary of the Latin Mass, interspersed with some Estonian folk hymns. The second half of the concert offers a unique glimpse into the ancient runic song tradition, as presented in Margo Kõlar’s “The Songs of Olden Limes” — a cycle based on runic songs that enables a trip into the world of our ancestors. These songs also show a mixture of temporal and aeonian motifs, and both animatistic and Christian world views.

Estonia’s strategic location has left a mark on its history, with many peoples vying for its territory — Vikings, Germans, Swedes, Danes, Slavic nations, and others. Estonia is also the crossroads between Eastern and Western Christianity, and from early on, the local tribes with their animatistic world view and ancestor worship posed barriers to the expanding influence of the Roman popes and the Eastern Orthodox patriarchs. During Estonia’s fifty years under the Soviet Union, atheism was the state religion and aimed to blur the memory of national identity, as well as the meaning of the Christian Church.

It has been a joyous occasion the past decades to rediscover the records of Estonia’s religious singing culture in our archives — religious folk songs. Cyrillus Kreek (1889–1962), one of Estonia’s most important folk music collectors, described those songs as “twirling and ribboned” and sung on the texts of the traditional Protestant songbook with the tunes richly embellished and sometimes unrecognizable.

The origin of this folk hymn tradition is still obscure, but there is enough evidence to assume a spiritual connection to the movement of the eighteenth-century Herrnhut (Moravian) Brethren, who triggered a powerful wave of piety among the rural population. Another influence likely originated from the population of Swedish settlers on Estonian islands and coastal areas. Their strong cultural identity most certainly impacted the way their neighboring Estonians perceived the wider world. It’s quite possible that the melismatic character of folk hymns derives directly from Scandinavian folk music, as the runic songs (regilaul) — old songs of Finno-Ugric origin — belong to a different cultural context.

Approximately five hundred folk hymns with different versions have been collected in Estonia and are in both the Estonian and the Swedish languages. The older songs indicate monodic thinking, and the more recent ones include a rising sense of harmony connected to the introduction of organs and harmoniums in churches and chapels. Most likely these songs were sung mainly in homes, which could explain the rich ornaments, but they were also performed at church services and religious meetings. The latter location raises the question of how these various (and occasionally virtuously embellished) songs would have sounded in those times. Contemporary sources differ. Some describe the singing of the congregation as the “bleat of lambs” and the “howl of wolves.” One record says: “[The] Precenter started the singing, the other singers watched where the singing was heading and followed. There was no strict rhythm; the next note was sung when it seemed appropriate. The song was usually very slow, and quicker singers added their own embellishments while waiting for the others.”

Other records offer other depictions: “Those who have not heard this singing, cannot quite imagine it. The chapel is filled with seven hundred people who are singing from the bottom of their hearts. Older people sway their heads to the rhythms of the song; young boys sing wholeheartedly, the voices of young girls ring like whooping shepherds. There are times when all this singing overpowers the organ itself, although loud singing and strong effort is not an intention in itself. The song is almost like a liberation, a sacrament. The upward glances showed that most singers were no longer aware if they were sitting on wooden benches or hovering in the sky.”

Often, various melodies were applied to the same lyrics, and it was usual to sing different words to the same tune. This practice seems to be characteristic of the formation of folk hymns. It is an oral tradition supported by various memories, further mixed with the choral tunes and texts written originally in German, Swedish, or Estonian. In their translations, the lyrics and the tune do not quite match. It required remarkable musical imagination to synthesize the beloved pious texts with two or three local languages and the Lutheran choral tradition.

But what would the musical world of ancient Estonians have been like at the beginning of the second millennium, an era before the onset of the crusades? We can proudly mention the archaic runic songs (songs in the poetic metre of regivars) that are unique to Estonians and other Finno-Ugric peoples. According to scholars, the oral tradition of runic songs has been alive for thousands of years and currently seems to be undergoing a fresh revival. Thanks to the Estonian national awakening in the second half of the nineteenth century, these songs were gathered into what is now one of the world’s largest collections of folklore. The rich, colorful, and imaginative texts of these songs are a welcome supplement to the scarce knowledge we have about Estonia’s ancient history.

Arrangements of the folk hymns and runic songs exist mostly in an oral tradition and, therefore, require a certain amount of improvisation. Having an open mind toward change enables us to enjoy the charms of traditional music.

Program notes by Margo Kõlar, artistic director of Heinavanker.
“Oh Adam, Thy Falsehood”

Oh Adam, thy guilt has spoiled our life, sin is our inheritance and the burden of us all.
The serpent’s deed has weighed us down with a great mistake, but God, in all honor saved everything again.

Mercy was shown to us, the Son was given to us, born to our brother and nailed to the cross.

We all truly believe in the name of the Son, for then the Father will bring us happiness and joy.

Praised Be You, Jesus Christ

Praised be you, Jesus Christ that you have been born as a man from a virgin — this is true — at which the host of angels rejoices.

He whom the whole globe of the earth could not enclose now lies in Mary’s bosom; he has become a little baby who alone maintains everything.

The eternal light enters here, it gives the world a new splendor; it shines in the midst of the night and makes us children of the light.

He has done all this for us to show his great love, at this all Christendom rejoices and thanks him for this in eternity.

Awake My Heart

Awake my heart and sing to the creator of everything, to the giver of all that is good, to the righteous guardian of mankind.

This night, when the dark shadows have surrounded me completely, Satan coveted what was mine but God was my defense.

You said: “My child, lie down, despite the one who would deceive you; sleep well, do not be frightened, you will see the sun.”

Your word has come to pass: I can still see the light, I have been set free from my distress, your protection has revived me.

You wish to have an offering, here I bring my gifts: my incense and my ram are my prayers and songs.
Sa näid mu südamesse ja tead, mu Jumal, ise, et paremat ei ole mul anniks tuua sulle.

Mu Jumal, nii kui ööse mind hoidis sinu käsi, nii päeva ka mind kanna, mull' inglid varjuks anna.

Su heldus jäägu mulle, mu süda templiks sulle: su sõna mind siin toitku, teed taeva poole naitku.

“Rahva Õnnistegija”
Rahva õnnistegija, mao ararohuja, Naise seeeme, neitsi poeg, sulle laulvad kiitust koik.

Imevisil tõeste tulid sina ilmale, saadud Pühä Vaimu väest, mitte mehe tahtmisest.

Igavese järje pealt oled sina ulevalt armast maha astunud, võiduteele hakamud.

Isast tuli sinu tee, pööras jälle Isale, enne põrguhauda, siis üles taeva tema viis.

Kes sa Isa sarnane ning ka meie sugune, lihas ilmund võidumees: võida liha meie sees!

You will not feel scorn; you can see into my heart; for you know that as a gift I have indeed nothing better.

May it now be your will to perfect your work in me, and send one who during this day may bear me in his hands.

Protect me with your blessing, may my heart be your shelter, may your word be my food until I journey to heaven!

Redeemer of the Folk
Now come, Savior of the gentiles, recognized as the child of the Virgin, so that all the world is amazed God ordained such a birth for him.

Not from man's flesh and blood but only from the Holy Spirit has God's Word became man and flourishes as the fruit of a woman's body.

He went forth from his chamber, from the royal palace so pure, by nature God and man, a hero, he hastens to run his way.

His course came from the Father and leads back to the Father, he went down to Hell and back to God's throne.

You who are equal to the Father, be victorious in the flesh so that your eternal divine power may support our weak flesh.

Oh kuis hiihab sinu söim!
Kadund pimeduse võim!
Patüü ei enam saa meie usku rikkuda.

Kiitust olgu Isale, kiitust tema Pojale, kiitust Pühä Vaimul' ka ikka ilmalõpmata!

Sanctus, Mass of Tournai (14th century)
Agnus Dei, Mass of Toulouse (14th century)

“Ma olen maa peal vööras”
Ma olen maa peal võöras ja pahalt rändaja; mu eluse taevas, seal on mu isamaa. Siin rändan ristirada, seal vaimu väsinud arm võtab kosutada: köök vaev on lõpetud.

“Mu mano tulge latse”
“Mu mano tulge, latse, na mulle armas omm,” nii armas Jeesus kutse.
“Ma teie kilp ja kroon. Et hukka na ei saa, ma esi sünd lates, et saasse minto omas, näid ole kutsnu ma.”

“Veni Creator Spiritus”/
“Oh Jumal, Looja, Pühä Vaim”
Veni, Creator Spiritus, mentes tuorum visita,imple superna gratia, quae tu creasti pectora.

Oh Jumal Looja, Pühä Vaim!
Mu süda on nii väga tuim, oh täida seda armuga ja köigest patust puhasta.

Your crib shines bright and clear, in the night there is a new light, darkness must not overpower it, faith remains always radiant.

Praise be given to God the Father, praise be to God his only Son; praise be to God the Holy Ghost for ever and always.

“A Stranger on Earth Am I”
A stranger on earth am I, and a bare wanderer. My dwelling is in the heavens, there is my fatherland. Here I wander the way of the Cross, and there Grace salves my weary soul; there is all trouble ended.

“Let the Children Come to Me”
“Let the children come to me, They are dear to my heart,” Thus dear Jesus is calling.
“I am your shield and crown. I was born a child, So that they would not perish. I have called them to be mine.”

Come Creator Spirit
Come, Holy Ghost, Creator, come, From thy bright heav'ny throne, Come take possession of our souls, And make them all thy own.

Thou who art called the Paraclete, Best gift of God above, The living spring, the living fire, Sweet unction and true love.
Qui diceris Paraclitus, donum Dei altissimi, fons vivus, ignis, caritas, et spiritualis unctio.

Thou who art sev'nfold in thy grace,
Finger of God's right hand
His promise teaching little ones
To speak and understand.

O guide our minds with thy bless’d light,
With love our hearts inflame;
And with thy strength, which ne’er decays
Confirm our mortal frame.

Far from us drive our deadly foe;
True peace unto us bring;
And through all perils lead us safe
Beneath thy sacred wing.

Through thee may we the Father know,
Through thee th’ eternal Son,
And thee, the Spirit of them both,
Thrice-blessed Three in One.

All glory to the Father be,
With his coequal Son;
The same to thee, great Paraclete,
While endless ages run.

Deo Patri sit gloria, et Filio, qui a mortuis surrexit, ac Paraclito, in saeculorum saecula.

Hakkas ta pesa tegema:
tegi kuu, tegi kaksi,
tegi tükki kolmat kuuda,
nädaliku neljat kuuda,
veerendiku viiet kuuda.

Hakkas ta mune munema:
munes kuu, munes kaksi,
munes kuu kolmat kuuda,
nädaliku neljat kuuda,
veerendiku viiet kuuda.

Hakkas poegi hauumaia:
hauus kuu, hauus kaksi,
hauus kuu kolmat kuuda,
nädaliku neljat kuuda,
veerendiku viiet kuuda.

Üks sai kuux Kuramaale, teine päeavaks Pärnumaałe,
kolmas ilmale imeksi,
neljas tähks täeavaksi,
viies viikerkaareks veeremaie.

“Nätse Jummal, siin ma rummal”
Nätse Jummal, siin ma rummal,
heida enda põlvile
hinge rikmist
tooma siinole.
Las hend loida,
minost, kes ma patane.

Kae no jälle, minno pääle,
Issand ole armulik.
Sinno päivvä
mina, mullatükk.
Las hend loida,
ole mulle armulik.

Ei ma päivvä, ei ma növva
muud, kui sino halestust, scda sa kül
näütät armastust.

The bird started to build a nest:
she built it for a month, for another month,
for a third month,
for a week on the fourth month,
a bit on the fifth month.

She started to lay eggs:
laid for a month, for another month,
for a third month,
for a week on the fourth month,
a bit on the fifth month.

She started to hatch the eggs:
hatched for a month, for another month,
for a third month,
for a week on the fourth month,
a bit on the fifth month.

One chick became the moon for Kurland,
the second became the sun for Pärnu county,
the third became the world,
the fourth became the stars,
the fifth became the rainbow.

Here Behold Me as I Cast Me
Here behold me as I cast me
At Thy throne, O glorious King!
Tears fast thronging, childlike longing,
Son of Man, to Thee I bring,
Let me find Thee—let me find Thee!
Me a poor and worthless thing.

Look upon me, Lord, I pray Thee,
Let Thy Spirit dwell in mine;
Thou hast sought me, Thou hast bought me,
Only Thee to know I pine;
Let me find Thee—let me find Thee!
Take my heart and grant me Thine.

Nought I ask for, nought I strive for,
But Thy grace so rich and free,
That Thou givest whom Thou lovest,
And who truly cleave to Thee;
Las hend löödä, sinost saa ma önnistust.

Let me find Thee—let me find Thee!
He hath all things who hath Thee.

Tühi kära, ilma vara, lihahimo, au nink lust, saadap mulle vallo, kannatust.

Earthly treasure, mirth, and pleasure, Glorious name, or richest hoard, Are but weary, void, and dreary, To the heart that longs for God; Let me find Thee—let me find Thee! I am ready, mighty Lord.

“Imeline koda” (Wondrous House)
In the temporal sense, this text is rather cryptic. The storyteller appears to travel to a divine realm where, by partaking in a strange ritual, she is included in the creation of the temporal world.

At dawn, a maiden goes to the woods where a bronze calf crosses her path. She pursues the calf and arrives at a manor where three men are building a bronze house. The men have axes with patterns inscribed on them. “Can you read ax patterns?” they ask. “No,” says the maiden, “I can read patterns of cloth.” The maiden weaves a blue fabric. “What will you make of it?” “A striped shirt for the Lord, and a long shirt for Mary.” A blue cauldron is being set on blue flames; a blue sheep is being sheared for blue wool.

“Haned kadunud” (Missing Geese)
One of the possible meanings of this song is the theme of “sacrifice.” The condition of loss at the beginning of the song gives way, after a strange quest, to a new miraculous world. The mystery of Christ’s body and blood is hinted at in the background.

A maiden goes to herd geese, but a hawk scares the geese away. The maiden comes home in tears and tells her parents what just happened. The parents want to send a servant in search of the geese, but instead the daughter herself goes after them. She walks through five rainbows and meets ten ploughmen. She asks whether any of them has seen the geese. The men take no notice of the girl until she takes the hat off one of them, whereupon they give her directions to the Muori manor. Once there, she is offered a chair made of goose bones and padded with pillows of goose feathers. She is served a meal of goose meat and a drink of goose blood. The maiden goes to pour the drink out in a meadow where it gives rise to a dense forest. Miraculous birds roost on top of the trees.

“Jeesuse söit” (The Ride of Jesus)
A story with a harsh morale. Those who defy, on whatever grounds, God’s will, will meet a sorry end. Those who act out the will of God, whatever their motives, will see their people flourish.

Jesus rides a boat of swan bones on a river, past the banks of Holy Mary. He meets a church. Jesus asks the church to help him cross over to the dry land where he could meet Mary. The church refuses—tomorrow will be Sunday and a lot of people will be coming over. Jesus curses the church: “Your people will suffer.”

Then he meets a horse. The horse also refuses; he has a lot of work to do. Jesus curses the horse: “Once you go ploughing, you will be slaughtered. May the wolves and ravens scatter your dead body!”

Finally, he meets an ox who is willing to aid him for a price. Jesus blesses him: “When they slaughter you, the whole family will come together. They will brew beer and hold a feast.”